Year 7 students dressed in national costumes for International Day of Languages.

A Forest Gate school has received the British Council's International School Award in recognition of its work to bring the world into the classroom.

In receiving the award, St Angela's Ursuline School was highly commended for embedding internationalism into the curriculum and creating a love of language learning.

An example of this is the school's pen-pal exchange, which will soon see every student in years 7-9 with an international pen pal.

There are many international activities throughout the year, including several partnerships with schools abroad - experiences which allow students to learn a foreign language and learn about the culture of that country.

All students are involved in the international activities, which cover a variety of subject areas.

Headteacher Mark Johnson said: "I am thrilled for the students of the school and especially the modern foreign language department."
